HEALTHY HABITS

One cannot understate the importance of health & wellness programs for the future of our students and society at large. Supporting healthy habits for student nutritional and physical needs is a key indicator for innovative high schools. Creating engaging, universal physical education and athletic spaces that facilitate interaction, foster equity, enhance school pride, and promote health and wellness are key attributes to our design approach. When done successfully they can help foster lifelong habits in wellness and physical fitness.

We design opportunities for students to not only practice their skills, but push themselves through competition. This is critical to a rich student experience. These spaces will also draw in the community, becoming a source of pride for parents and visitors. The design for public participation in these spaces is a significant contributor to the overall design of these areas. Generous lobbies, adjacent parking, clear wayfinding, and adequate support facilities that can be operated for afterschool events is key to a successful design.
